The building is braced together in a most peculiar way, and is, in addition, firmly belted to the rocks wherever the road nears the face of a cliff. Where snowslides are to be feared, an extension of the roof has been carried to the cliffs, so that falling masses shall pass over the building, and lodge on the other side. In many places, where side tracks are located, the building is wider than the figures given above. More than forty million feet of lumber have been used in its construction.
